SPECIAL CLASS FOR SLOW And ADVANCED LEARNER 2019-2020 ROUTINE

It is true that not all students are capable of receiving the message (the topic taught) in one go. So with the marks they hold in their examination makes it prominent about the slow and advanced learner. So it is the duty of the faculty to provide a platform for the slow learners so that they can also cope up with their study well. For that special classes has been taken with proper attendance for both the slow and advanced learner using books and PPT's and the content study material has been provided all through online using ICT tools. They are also given assignments carrying marks on various subjects to see the invariability and capability, so that they can have a better understanding of the subjects and improve their study. All the documents are given below.

National Codes of Conduct The Press Council of India

In some of the third world countries, and particularly India, the Press Council is a statutory body. A Bill was introduced in the Parliament in 1956. But it lapsed with the dissolution of the House in 1957. No further action for setting the Council was taken for nearly a decade thereafter. It was only after National Integration Council, strongly recommended the establishment of Council that the Bill was resurrected and the Press Council Act passed by the Parliament in 1965. The Press Council of India constituted under the Act came into being on 4th July, 1966.

The Press Council under the Act of 1965 was abruptly abolished by the Press Council Repeal Act, 1976 during the days of the 1975 National Emergency. In 1977 Janata Party came to power and they enacted the Press Council Act, 1978. The object of 1978 Act stated that the establishment of the Press Council was to preserve the Freedom of the Press and maintenance and improvement of the standard of newspapers and news agencies in India.

Constitution:

Under 1978 Act the Council consists of a Chairman and twenty eight members, of whom thirteen were to be nominated from among journalists including six, who were to be editors of newspapers. Of the remaining fifteen members, six were to be nominated from among persons who own or carry on the business of management of newspapers. Of them, three were to represent newspapers published in Indian languages, and those published in other languages. Of the three belonging to each category one each was to be the representative of the big newspapers, medium newspapers and small newspapers. One person was to be nominated from among persons managing news agencies. Of the remaining Eight members three were to be persons having special knowledge or practical experience in respect of education, literature law and culture, of whom one each was to be nominated by the University Grants Commission, Bar Council of India and Sahitya Academy respectively. The remaining five members were to be chosen from members of the Parliament; three are to be from Lok Sabha and two from the Rajya Sabha. The term of members including that of the Chairman was three years. The Press Council has two important functions:

- * Watchdog of Journalistic Ethics and
- * A shield to Freedom of the Press.

D WATCH DOG OF JOURNALISTIC ETHICS:

Section 26 of the Act empowers the Council to frame regulations for conducting inquiries. The Council has framed the Press Council (Procedure for Inquiry) Regulations, 1979.

How to make a Complaint?

Any person making a complaint to the Council in respect of a publication or non-publication of any matter under Section 14(i) of the Act should furnish in the complaint the following details.

- Name and address of the newspaper or news agency, editor or other working journalist against whom or which the complaint is preferred.
- A Statement showing in what manner the publication and non-publication of the matter complained of is objectionable.
- A copy of the letter written by the complainant to the newspaper or news agency, or editor or other working journalist bringing the matter to his notice, together with a copy of reply if any received. However, in appropriate cases the Chairman has discretion to waive the condition.
- In cases where the complaint is that the editor or working journalist has committed a professional misconduct other than by way of publication or non-publication, the complainant shall set out clearly in detail the facts, which according to him justify the complaint.

There are exceptions to the rule. In *C. S. Kala v. Arun Shourie*² the complaint related to the publication of the report in Indian Express containing filthy words used by the Deputy-Prime Minister. The editor contended that the complainant had no locus standi. The complainant submitted that use of such filthy words was detrimental to public taste and asserted locus standi as it was a matter of public interest. Here the complainant was not challenging the veracity of the report, but only that such publication was detrimental to public interest. The Council proceeded with the inquiry into the complaint and held that the editor could have made the report after excluding the offensive words. This shows that any interested person can lodge a complaint if filthy, vulgar, or abusive words are used in any published matter. If defamatory matter about a religious leader is published, a devotee or disciple has locus standi to move complaint.

Jurisdiction

In a major decision on jurisdiction, the Council ruled in *Dr. A. K. Saklha v. Comparative Physiology and Ecology*³ that the Council had no jurisdiction to inquire into an instance of breach of contract. The complainant pertained to alleged false assurances given by the editor about publication of complainant research papers. According to him he had fulfilled all conditions laid by the journal for publication. The Council held that the substance of the complaint was breach of contract between them and as such there was no reasonable nexus between the matter and the functions of the Council. Therefore the Council had no jurisdiction.

Sub-judice:

The Press Council will not take action on a complaint if it is pending in any court of law. This is treated as sub-judice. This was made clear in *Dr. S. V. Champuru v. Mudday*⁴, here the complainant's suit is pending before Bombay High Court. The Council therefore decided to drop further inquiry.

Section 4(3) of the Press Council Act prohibits the Council to hold an inquiry in any matter in respect of which any proceeding is pending in any court of law.

Journalistic Ethics¹⁵

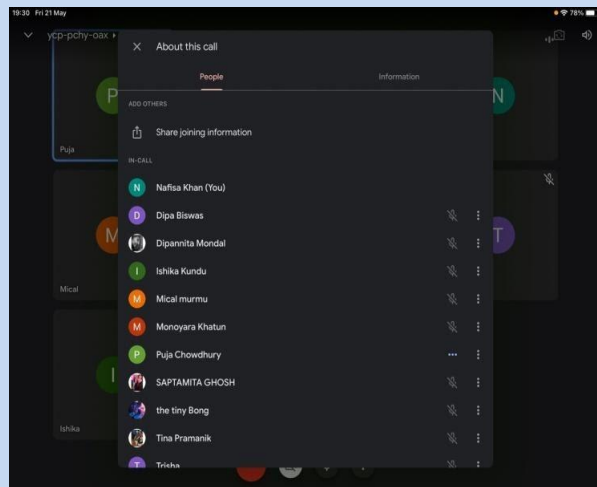

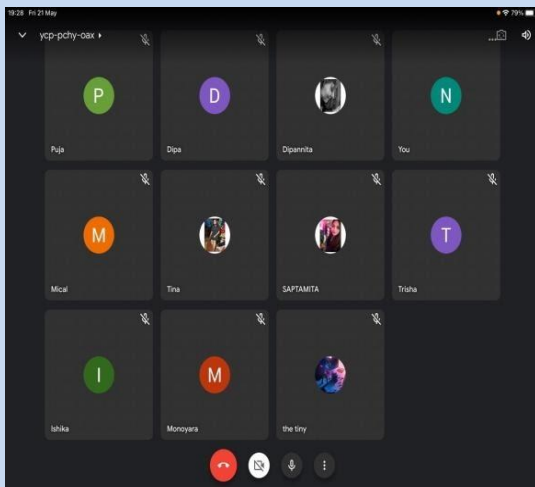

Every profession requires its own ethical standard. It is the code of honour of professional conduct which distinguishes a profession from a mere occupation¹⁶. The speciality of journalistic profession is its independence. In a profession it is necessary that they should be judged by his peer and the function is to be so exercised as to achieve the objective of exemplary professional conduct.

The Press Council in Norms of Journalistic Conduct states the Principles and Ethics that the fundamental objective of journalism is to serve the people with news, views, comments and information on matters of public interest in a fair, accurate, unbiased, sober and decent manner. Towards this end, the Press is expected to conduct itself in keeping with certain norms of professionalism universally recognised. The norms enunciated below, when applied with due discernment and adaptation to the varying circumstance of each case, will help the journalist to self-regulate his or her conduct. The norms are Accuracy and Fairness, Pre-publication Verification, Caution against defamatory writing, Parameter for the right of the Press to comment on the acts and conduct of public officials, right to privacy, recording interviews and phone conversation, Conjecture, comment and fact, Newspapers to eschew suggestive guilty, corrections, right of reply, letters to editor, obscenity and vulgarity to be eschewed, violence not to be glorified, glorification/encouragement of social evils to be eschewed, covering communal disputes/ clashes, heading not to be sensational/ provocative and must justify the matter printed under them, caste, religion or community references, reporting on natural calamities, paramount national interest, newspapers may expose misuse of diplomatic immunity, investigative journalism and its norms and parameters, confidence to be respected, caution in criticising judicial acts, newspapers to avoid crass commercialism, plagiarism, unauthorised lifting of news, non-return of unsolicited material and advertisements. Also Council issued some guidelines on specific issues.

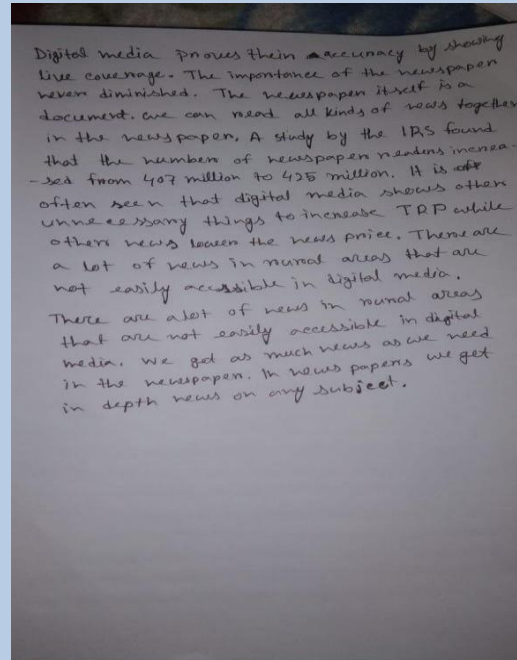

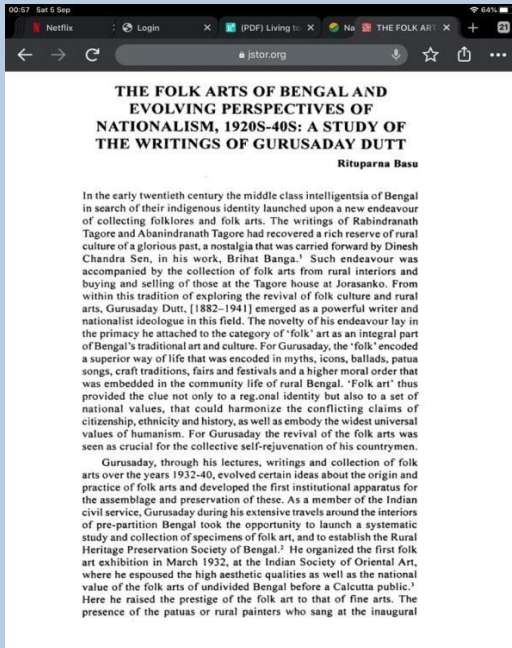

II. A SHIELD TO FREEDOM OF PRESS

It is open to any person to lodge a complaint with the Press Council against a newspaper for breach of ethical canons of journalistic propriety and public taste. The Press can approach the Council alleging interference with its free functioning. In such a case only a newspaper, a journalist or any institution or individual concerned with a journal can appear as a complainant. They may complain against Central
